Can't Find an Article? Order Through Interlibrary Loan

The library offers access to tens of thousands of online journals and eBooks through our website. If you can't find what you're looking for, the library will borrow or buy the article or book at no cost to you. This process is called interlibrary loan. How does interlibrary loan work?

1. Look for your article or book on the library's website or in PubMed. If you can't get to full-text of the article or simply can't find the item, move to Step 2.
2. Order through our new interlibrary loan system, Clio. Clio is replacing ILLiad and will be officially launched on October 12th. You may be asked if you want to order the article while you are searching PubMed or other library tools. All you need to do is enter your MD Anderson login credentials to submit a request.
3. The library will borrow the article or book from another library and pay any associated copyright or processing fees.
4. Once we receive the article from the lending library we will notify you by email. You should be able to download the article immediately.

Take a Break and Celebrate

Thursday, October 29th; Noon - 1pm

Take a break and join us for fun and spooky trivia! We would love to celebrate National Medical Librarians Month and American Archives Month with you!

Register to attend and show off your knowledge of Halloween, MD Anderson history and libraries.
