

Daniel S. Goldberg, J.D.

Daniel S. Goldberg, J.D., is currently the Intercultural Cancer Council Policy Fellow at Baylor College of Medicine's Chronic Disease Prevention and Control Research Center. He is also a Research Professor at Baylor College of Medicine's Initiative on Law, Brains, & Behavior. He graduated from Wesleyan University with honors in philosophy, from the University of Houston Law Center magna cum laude with a J.D. (focusing in health policy and ethics), and has completed his coursework in the Ph.D. program in medical humanities at UTMB. His dissertation will be on pain and pain management, and he also does work in neuroethics, research ethics, public health policy, and the history of medicine and public health.

